

Love China as My Second Hometown——

Husseini Sulemana

Husseini Sulemana's relationship with China began on February 26, 2018. On that day, he said goodbye to Ghana, where he had lived for many years, and set foot on a flight to China alone. Due to the differences in language, dietary habits, climate and environment, like many other foreign students in China, he did find his life in China is not plain sailing. However, he has never abandoned himself or complained about others. Instead, he has always actively adjusted himself to learn, understand, accept and love all aspects of China.

For Sulemana, Jiangsu University provides him many opportunities in China. Here, he encountered excellent supervisors and Chinese students, guiding his academic career. Here, he met like-minded friends who shine in various cultural and sports activities together. Here, he met amiable teachers, who led him to deeply understand Chinese culture.

He is willing to learn, accept and brave enough to try those "Chinese modes" that are very new to him. He said, "I am willing to take a Chinese lifestyle without hesitation and feel the beauty of China during my stay in China". He loves Chinese culture. No matter on the way of cultural perception or in the preparation of artistic performances, he is always seen silently holding a small book, constantly recording the Chinese cultural knowledge he has learned, and accumulating his love for China in bits.

Sulemana always believes in his fate with China. He hopes to spend more time understanding China's culture, history, national conditions, Chinese way of thinking and so on. He believed that after become a part of the China's countryside, following the customs, adapting to the local conditions and customs of China and integrating into the country, he would one day become a "China expert".
