How Jiangsu University's 4C strategy helped me unleash my potential.

I came to Jiangsu University to further my education in the field of Economics particularly international trade. Jiangsu university granted me the platform not only to enrich my academic knowledge but also to excel in every aspect of my life particularly my career development.

Critical Thinking

Through exposure to the university's rich academic sources and guidance from my professors I was able to publish my paper on Strategic Economic Partnerships and International trade. I was granted the opportunity to present my research together with professors from all over the world at the ENGII Annual Economics Conference .

JSU Dean's open door policy.

Our OEC Dean Professor Gao maintains an open door policy where she invites students who have bright ideas to approach her at any time. I took advantage of this opportunity and together we set up the JSU International Foundation School. To assist students from all over the world to quickly adapt to the Chinese Academic system in terms of basic subject skills, language and cultural awareness. I believe this was the first such initiative in China and a number of universities have adopted our model under the stellar example of Professor Gao.

Collaboration

Through collaborating with my professors, our Dean and a number of postgraduate students I was able to meaningfully contribute to the setting up of the Jiangsu University Foundation school. A platform I would have never got if it wasn't for the Dean's open door policy and her passion to assist students achieve their full potential.

When the CEO of a Shanghai Based Internet start-up came to our University for a consultative meeting the Dean invited me to share my experiences with him. Through the culture of communication fostered at JSU I was able to articulately express my views. The CEO was impressed by the work I had done and I was offered an internship opportunity in his company.
